

ABSTRACT

[0073] In a terminal device, when instruction code is executed in accordance with an application program, it is determined whether the instruction code is instruction code whose execution is restricted in the terminal device. Then, when it is determined that there is instruction code whose execution is restricted, and at least some data stored in the terminal device will be accessed due to the execution of the instruction code, execution of the instruction code is prevented.